Angel Island is a wonderful natural resource, rich in California history and perfect for a day away from urban life. Take the short ferry ride from Tiburon and journey into the island's historical and cultural past while surrounded by panoramic views of the City and the Golden Gate Bridge. In 1850 President Fillmore declared Angel Island, the second largest island in San Francisco Bay, to be a military reserve. During the Civil War, the island was fortified to defend San Francisco Bay from a possible attack by confederate forces. In the 19th century, new arrivals to the U.S. entering the Port of San Francisco were housed and processed in quarters located at the Pacific Mail Steamship Company docks on the waterfront. After the quarters proved inadequate and unsanitary, a study, authorized in 1904, recommended building a new immigration station on the isolated and nearby Angel Island, now known as the Ellis Island of the West. Please note: There are 120 steps up to the museum. Depart from the Target parking lot in Davis at 8:00 am and return at approximately 5:30 pm.
